Main Theme

COMMUNITY AND VICTIM INVOLVEMENT IN THE CRIMINAL JUSTICE ADMINISTRATION

RECOMMENDATIONS

Councils for offender rehabilitation should be established both at the national and provincial levels to promote community involvement in rehabilitation.

The departments concerned should have their rehabilitation programs included in pamphlets or brochures and distributed to the public.

The departments should create a bond of partnership with community organizations which provide jobs, run vocational training programs, and provide amenities for those who are in need etc., so that clients should be served properly upon returning to their respective communities.

It should be emphasized that further collaborations beyond borders should be made to exchange ideas and experience in this field.

It should create more willingness among the public at large in terms of participation and co-operation in the rehabilitation and correction of offenders by providing education programs on probation services and probation officers' roles to the private sector or public.

Creating more awareness of the importance of having public participation in the rehabilitation of offenders, such as finding proper agencies to conduct proper education training, finding jobs for offenders during or after probation or parole.

Calling upon the government to provide larger budgets in order to recruit and or replace the personnel.
